

MRS. WALLERSTEIN FOUND AT BELLEVUE

WANDERING FROM HER HOME AT NIGHT AND GIVING A WRONG NAME AT THE HOSPITAL.

The search was made in the city yesterday morning for Mrs. Addie Wallerstein, who had disappeared from her home, at No. 23 West Sixtieth-st., in the night. The search ended happily when she was found in Bellevue Hospital before noon. She is the young wife of Henry Wallerstein, a dealer in skins, at No. 174 William-st. About two months ago she was dangerously ill with peritonitis. A trained nurse was in constant attendance upon her, and a physician was near her the greater part of the time, she has so far recovered as to be considered in need of less watchful care, but the use of strong medicines has made her somewhat flighty at times. The trained nurse left the house several days ago. She formerly had been employed at Bellevue Hospital, and she had spoken to Mrs. Wallerstein about the institution.

Late on Monday night Mrs. Wallerstein had a wish to see the nurse, and thought she might find her at the hospital. She dressed herself and left the house quietly, without attracting the attention of any member of the household. Not far from her home she called a cab and was driven to the hospital, arriving there soon after 11 p. m. As she seemed to be excited and said she desired hospital treatment, she was placed in a ward. She gave a wrong name and a wrong address. About 2 a. m., yesterday her husband missed her and was in great fear for her safety. A police alarm was sent out from the station. West Sixtieth-st., ordering a patrol to the houses of friends and relatives. Mr. Wallerstein went to Police Headquarters to inquire if any accident had happened to his wife. Mrs. Wallerstein's brother found her at 10 a. m. in Bellevue and telephoned to her husband, who took her home before noon. Last evening Mrs. Wallerstein said she was no longer in the hospital.

A STEER TRIES TO SWIM IN NEW YORK.

A Texas steer escaped from the Abattoir at Sixtieth-Jersey City, yesterday morning, and running to the river jumped in, heading for the New York shore. When about midstream the tugboat Harry overtook the animal, which then changed its course toward Hoboken. The crew of the tug fixed a lasso, and after many failures, dropped the rope over the steer's horns. The steer, much exhausted, was then towed back to Jersey City, where it was landed without trouble.
